WORK BUREAU SPONSORED

Employment Office Will Be Opened Here This Summer by Jr. C. of C.

That the Pleasanton Junior Chamber of Commerce will reopen its employment service bureau, similar to the one it sponsored a little more than three years ago, was definitely decided upon by the members at a meeting of the organization held at the Pleasanton City Hall Thursday evening of last week. President John Garibaldi stated that the office would be at Christesen's store on Main Street, and that working with him on the committee are Andrew Jorgensen, chairman, and Peter Christesen.

All business firms and farmers wishing to engage men for work are asked to leave their names at Christesen's store, together with the number of men needed and the kind of work to be done. All who are out of work and wish employment are also asked to file their applications at Christesen's store.

A similar bureau was sponsored by the Pleasanton Junior Chamber of Commerce and worked successfully.

Rose Bush To Be Dedicated

The Junior Chamber will also co-operate with the Livermore-Pleasanton Garden Club in getting the city-beautification plot at the corner of Main and Ray Streets cleaned up and ready for ceremonies to be held in connection with the dedication of a rose bush to be planted on the lot in memory of the late Charles Wehr, owner of the property. The planting will take place next Friday, March 29.

County 4-H Heads Plan Camp

Plans for the annual Alameda County 4-H Club summer camp to be held in June at Marsh Creek were discussed at a meeting of the Alameda County Council of 4-H Club leaders held at the home of Mrs. H. Lefever in Livermore Monday night. Plans were also discussed for the annual 4-H Club exhibit Day. The meeting was preceded by a potluck supper.

A committee was appointed to reorganize the senior group of 4-H members. Reports were given from all the leaders present, on their respective 4-H groups, which were interesting. It was also reported that several "galloping" lunches had been held, which were a success financially and socially. The next meeting of the leaders will be held at the Murray Elementary Schoolhouse in Dublin. A number of the Pleasanton 4-H leaders attended the meeting.

Jack Fiorio Attends 'All-Star' 4-H Club Conclave

Jack Fiorio, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fiorio of Pleasanton, is one of 73 "all-star" 4-H boys and girls of 4-H clubs of California, who attended a four-day convention held at the University of California at Berkeley Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of this week. Fiorio and Miss Cleo Cooper of Newark, all star 4-H girl, represented the Alameda County 4-H clubs at the meeting. The delegates represented 37 California counties.

During the four-day convention the representatives were given a glimpse into the world of science, arts, economics, and kindred fields.

Amador Future Farmers Are Shown Tree Grafting

Members of the Amador High School Future Farmers class and the Pleasanton 4-H Club leaders were given an interesting demonstration of tree-grafting in Pleasanton Monday. The tree-grafting was demonstrated by P. T. Meyers, of Hayward, assistant farm advisor.

Tassajara Group To Sink Second Well

Pending completion of its first well, now coring at 9670 feet, the Tassajara Oil Corporation will drill a second well 400 feet to the northeast of its original test, according to Edwin C. Street, president.

Purpose of the second well, it was explained, is to determine the asset value of a gas zone located between 1500 and 1600 feet which was indicated by an electrical log of the well and by extensive gas showings in the ditch, Street said.

Drilling of the second well will begin within the next ten days, it was stated. Start of the operations is dependent upon the release of a string of equipment now being used by the Tassajara drilling contractor, H. L. Whiston, for repair work in the nearby Tracy field.

Scout Financial Drive To Start Soon

Plans for the annual financial campaign of the Pleasanton Boy Scout Troop was discussed at a meeting of the Pleasanton Boy Scout Troop committee held at Jim's Creamery in Pleasanton last Friday night. It was decided that letters would be sent citizens of Pleasanton, with the Lions Club completing the drive with a person-to-person campaign. An all-day hike was planned for the local Boy scouts, and will be held soon.

The meeting was presided over by Mayor Thomas Orloff, troop committee chairman, and attended by the following committeemen, George Kruse, scoutmaster, Charles McNeill, assistant scoutmaster, Leslie Bryant, T. H. Silver, James Georgis, John Garibaldi, and James Trimingham.

Archbishop Mitty to Dedicate Pipe Organ Here

His Excellency, the Most Reverend Archbishop John J. Mitty, D. D., will dedicate the new pipe organ at St. Augustine's church in Pleasanton Sunday, April 28. Felix Schoenstein, organ-builder of San Francisco, will begin the work of installation immediately after Easter.

Mrs. Paul Gomez Zink, noted organist of San Francisco, assisted by the organist of the Dominican Sisters, Mission San Jose, will preside at the console of the new organ on the day of dedication.

Mr. Armand Girard, Mr. Ernest Woodward, and Mr. Brown, and the full choir from the Dominican Convent, Mission San Jose, will join with St. Augustine's adult choir for the ceremony.

Mrs. Rich Has Another Song Published

Mrs. Myrtle Rich of Livermore, who has many friends in Pleasanton, and who has had a number of her songs published in past years, recently had another song included in a collection of "Home and Hill Country Ballads" published by American Music, Inc., Studio Building, Portland, Ore. Mrs. Rich's song, one of twenty in the collection, is entitled "I Want You Back in Our Little Old Shack." Both the words and music of the song are by Mrs. Rich.

Amador Future Farmers Attend S. F. Meet

Several members of the Amador Chapter of Future Farmers of America attended the first annual Future Farmer marketing day in South San Francisco Wednesday and Thursday of this week. Easter at the Churches

St. Augustine's

(Rev. Thomas F. Byrne, Pastor)

The dominate note of all the three solemn services at St. Augustine's churcn, Pleasanton, and the one service at St. Raymond's, Dublin, on Easter morn will be joy and happiness and triumph with the risen Savior. "This is the day which the Lord hath made. Let us be glad and rejoice tnerein." Christ is risen, Christ is truly God, Christ is the victor. Christ is the conqueror, Christ's resurrection is a pledge of our own resurrection.

The St. Augustine's choral group, under the direction of Miss Thelma Ferrario, and with Mrs. F. Nevis at the console of the organ, will sing at the 7-o'clock and 8.30 masses and again at the 10 o'clock solemn service in the old shrine, St. Raymond's Church, Dublin, the oldest church in use in Alameda and Contra Costa counties.

The St. Augustine's adult choir will sing at the 10.30 mass, with Mrs. F. Nevis as organist and director. The Easter hymn, "All Glory, Praise and Honor to Thee, Redeemer, King," will be the recessional piece.

The Very Reverend Peter Foerster, Provincial of the Redemptorist Fathers, will preach at the 8.30 and 10.30 masses. Father Byrne, pastor, will preach at the 7-o'clock mass and at the 10-o'clock mass in Dublin.

Solemn Three Hours On Good Friday

Beginning at 12 o'clock noon the solemn "Three Hours" of Our Blessed Savior's Agony will be reverently observed. Immediately following the mass of the Presanctified, the Seven Last Words of Our Savior on the Cross will be preached by Very Reverend Father Foerster, Redemptorist Father. Following each word fitting prayers and hymns will be offered. The pastor, Father Byrne, is using every available space to accommodate the reverent laity from the community and valley.

The topic of Reverend Father Foerster's Good Friday evening sermon at 7.30, will be The Mental Suffering of Christ in His Agony, Passion and Death.

Easter Saturday Confessions for the boys and girls at 10.30 a. m. Very Reverend Father Foerster will assist the pastor, Father Byrne, with the morning confessions and Reverend Father Leonard of St. Joseph's College and Seminary, Mountain Viev, will hear in the evening, beginning at 7 o'clock.

The following is the order of services at St. Augustine's for the remainder of Holy Week after Good Friday:

Saturday—Services at 7 a. m., mass at 8 a. m., confessions from 3 to 6 p. m. and from 7 p. m. till all are heard.

Easter Sunday—Masses at 7, 8.30, and 10.30 a. m., at St. Augustine's and at 10 a. m., at St. Raymond's in Dublin.

Presbyterian

(Rev. Carroll Howard Pederson, Pastor)

Next Sunday is Easter Sunday, the day on which we commemorate the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. We shall begin the day on the top of Mt. Diablo in fellowship with numbers of others of Contra Costa and Alameda counties, starting the day with the blast of trumpets and the singing of the great resurrection hymns. The service will conclude at 7 o'clock, giving all an opportunity of lessurely driving home in time for the services of the community in which we live.

From 10 to 10.45 a special Easter program will be presented by the Sunday-school department of the church, of which Mrs. Walter T. Nilson is superintendent. Worship service is being planned in charge of some members of the junior, intermediate, high-school and adult departments. Special services of interest to the primary department will be held in their room at 10 o'clock with Mrs. Howard Morgan, Mrs. Sam Elliott, Miss Bonnie Miller, and Miss Phyllis Doucette. The nursery and beginners' classes will have a program with Miss Jeanette Huested and Mrs. Elwood Meeker in charge. Parents of the children are cordially invited to visit the sunday-school classes Sunday morning. The Sunday-school has been having an unusually large attendance during the lenten period.

At 10.45 a. m., the service of the church will begin, which is fifteen minutes earlier than usual so that we may close our service not later than 12.15 o'clock. The music of the morning will include mass singing of the congregation; anthems by the choir, "Blow Golden Trumpets," by Louise Stone, and "The King of Glory," by Ira Wilson; trumpet solo, "The Holy City," Lloyd R. Lofthus; and a vocal duet, "Hark, Hark, My Soul," the Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Pederson. Mrs. Lloyd R. Lofthus is the director and Jack Kolln is the accompanist. The sermon topic will be "Easter Lilies and Dynamite," by the pastor.

The Christian Endeavor evening meeting at 7 o'clock will also include an Easter service. High-school and out-of-high-school young people are especially invited to this meeting.

Good Friday Services

Friday, March 22, is Good Friday, and our church is uniting with the churches of Livermore in observance of the day. The service will be held from 1 to 3 o'clock in the Livermore Methodist Church, and the "Seven Words from the Cross" will be presented by various speakers, including the Rev. Mr. Pederson will lead the service from 1.15 to 1.40 and who will speak on the fourth word, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" Inspirational music will feature the most solemn hours.

Funeral Services Held For Mrs. Gyser

Funeral services for Mrs. Katherine Gyser, one of Pleasanton's oldest residents, were held from her late residence on Main Street, Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock, with Rev. Carroll H. Pederson, pastor of the Pleasanton Presbyterian Church, officiating. Mrs. Pederson sang a selection during the services. Cremation followed at an Oakland Crematorium. Pallbearers were Ernest W. Schween, Robert Cope, Earl Trimingham, Louis Gerloff, and William Mortensen of Pleasanton and Robert Bud Long of Oakland.

Mrs. Gyser, who was a native of Germany, would have been 95 years old in July. She came to California when twenty years of age. She was married and lived in the mining community of "Dutch Flat," Placer County, California, for a few years, her late husband being engaged in the mining business. After he retired from the mining business, they came to Pleasanton, where Mrs. Gyser spent more than sixty-five years.

She lived in her late residence on Main Street over sixty years, living the past two years of her life at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bertha Oneal, at the corner of First and Angela Streets. Mrs. Gyser had been ill for the past two years and died at the home of her daughter Thursday of last week. She was the only girl of a family of twelve, having eleven brothers, all of whom are dead.

She is survived by three children, Mrs. Bertha Oneal and John Schwab of Pleasanton and Henry Schwab of San Francisco. She leaves four granddaughters, Mrs. Robert Bud Long of Oakland, Miss Irma Schwab of Eureka, and the Misses Ruth and Grace Schwab of New York City. The last two have been in the movies, and went under the name of the Stewart Sisters. They now are dancing instructors.

Reliable Drug Shop Ad In 'Contact'

An advertisement entitled "Who Pays the Rent?" written by F. E. Hartzell of the Reliable Drug Shop in Pleasanton, and printed sometime ago in the Pleasanton Times, was reproduced in the March issue of "Contact," a magazine published in Detroit, Mich., by the Nyal Company. A whole page in the publication is devoted to the Reliable Drug Shop, to the reproduction of the advertisement, and to comment in connection with the advertisement.

"I have lots of fun," Mr. Hartzell is quoted as saying, "out of these short editorials published weekly in the local newspaper. Some of them raise an 'ire' and cause quite some comment. Altogether it is amazing the number of people who mention having read them."

Raymond Marce Dies In San Francisco

Raymond Marce, son of Mrs. Theresa Marce of Pleasanton, died at a San Francisco hospital Wednesday following an illness lasting a month. Funeral services will be held in San Francisco Saturday morning, with interment following at the Presidio. Marce, who was about fifty years of age, was born in Mission San Jose and was a World War veteran. He was a bachelor and had been employed by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

THREE HOT POTATOES

There are three hot potatoes in this congress:

(1) The Hatch bill extensions to prevent political activity in state administrative departments disbursing federal funds—(2) the Smith committee's suggestion to get rid of the present National Labor Relations board, appoint a new one, prevent it from being both prosecutor and judge and make it impartial rather than a pressure bureau to force a particular form of organization on labor whether it wants it or not—(3) the Walter Logan bill to give quick, easy and inexpensive relief from czarism in the growing maze of little one-man governments by requiring them to proceed within their constitutional and statutory authority without the present necessity of long and prohibitively expensive court procedure.

Perhaps each of these provisions could be brought nearer to perfection by greater delay—but there has been delay enough. All three areas stink. All three need attention along the general lines of these proposals. This is so clear that even their opponents hardly question it. The direction of the abuses in all three cases tend toward political coercion and perpetuation of the party in power, toward arbitrary personalized government away from the stability of government by law and toward the caprice and tyranny of government by men with few statutory limits on their discretion.

It is true that a part of the opposition is from the minority party and to that extent sounds like building up campaign material and is tinged with partisanship. But that sound and taint are completely offset by the fact that standing alone that group is so far in the minority as to be futile. In every case, the sponsors and the strength of the supporters are Democrats.

But they are Democrats who, for the most part, are not radical and extreme New Dealers. There are notable exceptions, but the latter clique in congress is almost a unit in rabid and uncompromising opposition.

It isn't a pretty picture. This is largely the bunch that clamors for a third term for Mr. Roosevelt and who are so out of touch with their own party that they could hardly expect to survive in politics if he doesn't get it.

FARLEY 'FARMERS' DAY'

For an affair so widely advertised as "non-political," Henry Wallace's birthday party for the AAA was about the most powerful political stunt that has yet been pulled.

It was geared to get a capacity radio audience of our six to seven million farm families. They were also reminded that, from the moment the President took office, he began pushing for legislation, part of which they had so long demanded, and never stopped plugging until he got it.

On these facts, Mr. Roosevelt told them: "So it is more important than ever (due to the war) for the farmers to have a government in Washington that is looking out for their interests."

Mr. Farley warned them against taking it for granted that the farm "benefits" would go on unless they attended "to the votes in congress which keep it going, or to the views of men and parties seeking office."

That is a good deal like Aubrey Williams' widely condemned advice to WPA workers to "vote to keep your friends in power" but it is effective politics.

Mr. Farley also proposed a national holiday — "Farmers' day" — to commemorate the occasion. Jim certainly is a talented political organizer.

If he could add a "WPA Workers' day" and a "Negroes' day" he would about complete the joining up of the "day" front of the minority class pressure groups upon which he must rely through public handouts for Democratic majorities.

Later on, when the youth and age groups are made a little more class conscious, he could add a "Youth day" and an "Old Folks' day."

The New Deal had a good opportunity and they made the most of it. But they go too far when they claim a monopoly on the policy of "equality for agriculture."

A group of Republicans, led by Charlie McNary and George Peek and a Democrat or two, invented most of the principles and arguments for their program. They were its Peters the Hermits.

One of the most famous tourist sights in the northland is the solitary "street car" of Skagway, Alaska, owned and operated by dyed-in-the-wool sourdough, Martin Itjen. With other gold-seekers of 1898, Itjen left the United States to seek his fortune in Alaska. He remained to build a street car, the only one in Skagway. The car is built on an automobile chassis, but there its resemblance to an auto or street car ends. A dummy is pictured on the platform of the vehicle. Itjen is now visiting the United States for the first time since 1898. The sourdough conductor is familiar to thousands of tourists.

Press Club Gets Preview of Next (Maybe) President

Possibilities, near possibilities, vague possibilities and one perennial candidate for the presidency are pictured at the National Press club's first political rally in Washington, D. C. Standing, left to right: Robert Jackson, attorney general; Rep. Bruce Barton, New York; Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, Montana; Norman Thomas, perennial candidate of the Socialist party, and Sen. Bennett Champ Clark, Missouri.

Star Dust STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

DON WILSON, the plump and genial radio announcer, has turned actor with a vengeance. He led up to it gently by using his voice, but not his poundage (he tips the scales at 300) in "Buck Benny Rides Again."

You'll see him in person in "The Round-Up," in the role of "Slim," made famous by the late Macklyn Arbuckle. And who knows, he may like acting so well that he'll never want to return to announcing.

The chief difficulty so far has been finding a horse that would hold him, but he's promised to take care of that by producing one that he rides frequently—seems that, though hefty, he's an expert horseman.

Right off the griddle is the report that Professor Quiz is all set to sign a deal with one of the major movie companies for a series of shorts centering around the Professor's radio specialty of questions and answers. Perhaps he's been inspired to do it by the success of those "Information Please" shorts.

Gone are the days when a hero had to be perfect every minute that he was on the screen. In Paramount's "Road to Singapore" Bing Crosby is a shiftless sort of guy, aided and abetted in a career of idleness by Dorothy Lamour and Bob Hope. Three other matinee idols have forgotten the maxims of their copybooks, so far as new pictures are concerned. Robert Montgomery gets himself hanged in "The Earl of Chicago"; George Brent portrays a fugitive from justice in "Till We Meet Again"; and Tyrone Power, believe it or not, is a gangster in his latest.

Bing Crosby

Judy Garland is on her way up, and rapidly. This year it was quite a distinction for anyone who wasn't in the cast of "Gone With the Wind" to win one of the annual awards of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences. Little Judy got a special one for work as "an outstanding juvenile."

Janice Logan looked so attractive in the brief costume that she wore when working in "Dr. Cyclops," the forthcoming Paramount technicolor picture, that the Art Students league voted her "The Best Undressed Woman of the Year." (That's the trick picture in which the members of the cast are reduced to one-fifth their natural size.) So now Miss Logan must be all-round champion so far as clothes are concerned. When she was a senior at swanky Sarah Lawrence college she was voted the School's Best Dressed Student.

According to Joan Bennett, one of the greatest predicaments well-dressed women fear is putting on a new outfit and then finding someone else wearing one just like it. That's what happened to her not long ago when she appeared to take part in a Bing Crosby broadcast. She was wearing a nifty new hat. She glanced around, and saw one exactly like it on the head of Sabu, the young Indian movie actor—he'd just put on his native turban.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Douglass Montgomery will make a Star Theater appearance March 27th with Florence Reed and Helen Claire in "Double Door" . . . Basil Rathbone had to pet a black cat for a scene in "Destiny"—the mangled thumb that resulted has just healed . . . Have you listened to the new Westinghouse program, "Musical Americana", recently? It's even better than it was in the beginning . . . Joel McCrea had a perfect vacation not long ago—according to his ideas; he stayed on a ranch where he worked as a cowhand, branding cattle and living in tents with the cowboys.

Western Kansas Cattlemen Face New Menace: Beef-Eating Birds

Farmers Find It Difficult To Fight Pests Who Cause Big Losses.

WICHITA, KAN.—Cattlemen of western Kansas have learned to cope with zero weather and blizzards which are hitting them now, but they are faced this year with a new menace—Kansas birds are eating Kansas cows.

Ray Lamberson, a cattleman of Liberal, brought two birds to the Wichita stockyards to show men of this part of Kansas specimens of the newest pests.

The birds are alighting on the backs of cows, boring through the skin, and literally starting to eat them alive.

One of the birds is an English starling; the other is similar to the Kansas state bird, the meadow lark.

"It seems that these starlings are teaching our state birds a few bad habits," Lamberson said. "I was born and raised in this part of the country, and never have seen any starlings here before."

Cows at Mercy.

Both species have long beaks and long claws. They alight on the cow's back, just above the rump. There, the cow neither can shake it loose nor brush it off with her tail.

They are attacking beef herds, but are doing most of their damage in dairy herds, according to Lamberson.

Farmers are finding it difficult to fight the pests. If they put out poisoned meat, dogs and cats, the pets of almost every farmhouse, eat it and die. So they have tried putting out poisoned seeds.

The sparrows and other birds that winter in this part of the country readily eat the poisoned grain. The starlings, however, refuse to touch it. Rather, they wait until the sparrows and other birds die from effects of the poison, and then attack them, boring through the breasts of their winged victims.

The English starling is a dark bird. Its feathers are nearly black near the quill end, but on the spread end, they have a purplish dot.

Bird books describe starlings as intelligent and carnivorous. While there is snow on the ground, seeds are plentiful along hedgerows, but the birds prefer to attack the cattle.

Eat More Than Grubs.

The other bird resembles a meadow lark but is somewhat darker and more husky than the ordinary species.

Old-timers here say they have often seen birds land on the backs of cattle, but only to eat grubs which grow under the skin of the animals, rather than the animals themselves.

Lamberson says that the type of boring the starlings do is different and that they eat more of the animal than just a grub.

The starling is a member of the grackle family, the same family to which crows and blackbirds belong. There are thousands of crows and blackbirds in Kansas all through the year, but they never have been seen to attack cattle.

Until they learn to cope with the trouble, many of the cattlemen are keeping their dairy herds in sheds.

At the same time they are hoping they will find some way to fight the pests because the Kansas climate is so well suited to breeding of the grackle family that there are likely to be thousands of them in the neighborhood in a few years.

Frightened Buster Bear Runs Away With Shiny Berry Pail

By THORNTON BURGESS

THE question is, did Buster Bear steal Farmer Brown's Boy's pail? To steal is to take something which belongs to some one else. There is no doubt that he stole the berries that were in the pail when he found it, for he deliberately ate them to the last one. He knew well enough that some one must have picked them, for who ever heard of blueberries growing in tin pails? So there is no doubt that when Buster took them he stole them. But with the pail it was different. He took the pail, but he didn't mean to take it. In fact, he didn't want that pail at all.

You see, it was this way: When Buster found that big tin pail brimming full of delicious berries in the shade of that big bush in the Old Pasture he didn't stop to think whether or not he had a right to them. Buster is so fond of berries that from the very second that his greedy little eyes saw that pailful he forgot everything but the feast that was waiting for him right under his very nose. He didn't think anything about the right or wrong of helping himself. There before him were more berries than he had ever seen together at one time in all his life, and all he had to do was to eat and eat. And that is just what he did do. Of course, he upset the pail, but he didn't mind a little thing like that. When he had gobbled up all the berries that had rolled out he thrust his nose into the pail to get all that were left in. Just then he heard a little noise as if some one was coming. He threw up his head to listen, and somehow, he never did know just how, the handle of the pail slipped back over his ears and caught there.

This was bad enough, but to make matters worse just at that very minute, he heard a shrill, angry voice shout: "Hi, there! Get out of there!" He didn't need to be told whose voice that was. It was the voice of Farmer Brown's Boy. Right then and there Buster Bear nearly had a fit. There was that awful pail fast over his head so that he couldn't see a thing. Of course that meant that he couldn't run away, which was the thing of all things, he most wanted to do. You see, big as he is, and strong as he is, Buster is very shy and bashful when human beings are around. He growled and whined and squealed. He tried to back out of the pail and couldn't. He tried to shake it off and couldn't. He tried to pull it off, but somehow he couldn't get hold of it. Then there was another yell. If Buster hadn't been so frightened himself he might have recognized that second yell as one of fright, for that is what it was. You see, Farmer Brown's Boy had just discovered Buster Bear. When he had yelled the first time he had supposed it was one of the young cattle who live in the Old Pasture all summer, but when he saw Buster he was just as badly frightened as Buster himself. In fact, he was too surprised and frightened even to run. He just stood still and stared after that second yell.

With a mighty "whoof!" he started for the Green Forest as fast as his legs could take him.

Buster clawed at that awful thing on his head more frantically than ever. Suddenly it slipped off so that he could see. He gave one frightened look at Farmer Brown's Boy, and then with a mighty "Whoof!" he started for the Green Forest as fast as his legs could take him, and this was very fast indeed, let me tell you. He didn't stop to pick out a path, but just crashed through the bushes as if they were nothing at all, just nothing at all. But the funniest thing of all is this—he took that tin pail with him! Yes, sir; Buster Bear ran away with the big tin pail of Farmer Brown's Boy! you see when it slipped off, the handle was still around his neck! He didn't want it. He would have given anything to get rid of it. But he took it because he couldn't help it. And that brings us back to the question: Did Buster Bear steal Farmer Brown's Boy's pail? What do you think ?

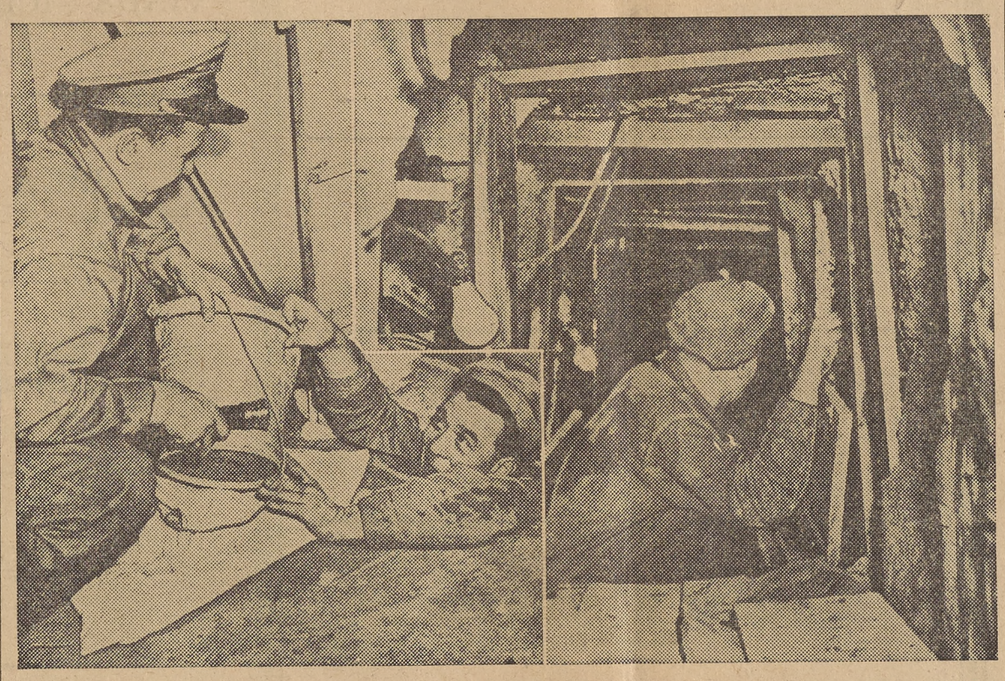
Prisoners Nabbed in Daring Tunnel Escape Plot



A wholesale jail break was prevented by officials of the Eastern state penitentiary at Philadelphia, Pa., when two 38-foot tunnels, dug by convicts, were discovered leading from prison cells. Detectives, armed with machine guns, were rushed to the penitentiary when the plot was discovered. One of the suspected inmate plotters committed suicide.

ARMY AIR CORPS TO ADD 150 TRAILER DARK ROOMS

CHICAGO.—A fleet of more than 150 auto trailer dark rooms, fully equipped to develop and print aerial pictures in the field under actual wartime conditions, will soon be a part of the United States army air corps.

For more than two years, the air corps has experimented with various types of trailer coach dark rooms perfected by auto trailer manufacturers. As a result of those protracted experiments, army officials will build the fleet.

The new "portable photographic laboratories"—that is how the army officially describes them—are intended to take the place of the old-style field dark rooms, which were more or less stationary because they required tents to be erected, equipment and materials to be packed into trucks, followed by unpacking, and too much time before being put into operation.

D. D. Arehart, president of the Palace Travel Coach corporation, which built the first portable photographic laboratories for test purposes, said the vehicles are "constructed of non-corrosive metals and built to be used in any temperature or weather conditions in the world."

"They are constructed so as to travel at high speed over rough land and open ditches," Arehart said. "They contain all the delicate equipment and instruments for modern photography. They are air-conditioned and furnished with drying equipment for high speed printing and developing. They are equipped with their own power plants and are capable of operating in any location and give high speed and accuracy in developing pictures during field operation under conditions of warfare."

What to Do

BY PHYLLIS BELMONT

WILL you kindly tell me where the salad should be placed when eaten with the main course? To the right or to the left of the dinner plate? Should the dessert course be served at the table or placed on the individual dishes in the kitchen and brought to the dining room? Thank you.
MRS. HOSTESS.

Answer—The general rule is to place the salad plate at the left, but if the guest is to be considered, it is much easier for him to have the salad at his right and be able to eat it without reaching over his main plate. Of course, if a beverage is served with the main course, then the space to the right of the dinner plate is occupied and the salad plate will have to go to the left. If the hostess is responsible for the cooking as well as serving the dinner, then whichever way is easiest for her to serve the dessert is the right way. It seems quite natural if the hostess has prepared a luscious-looking pie or a pudding that looks as if it were ready to have its picture taken she will wish her guests to enjoy looking at it and hence will serve it at the table.

This Started With An Old Car Seat

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

WE KNOW what becomes of old automobiles for their graveyards are all too obvious. But how about that backseat cushion with springs almost as good as new? The sketch shows what became of one such seat.

It was padded out at the ends to make the back the same length as the front. Extra padding was also used on the top to make it smooth. A simple base with a back and wings was made of one-inch boards, to fit the seat. Next, came the cretonne slip-cover for the spring seat, with a box pleated ruffle around the front and along the sides up to the wings. A bright peacock blue tone in the cretonne was used for seam cordings and was matched in paint for the wings and back of the seat.

NOTE: Sewing Book 1 contains 32 pages of directions for making slip-covers and curtains; books 2 and 3 give directions for the embroidered pictures over the mantel. 'As Thin as Thin'

Gold is one of the most malleable of metals and can be hammered out into sheets one 300,000th of an inch in thickness. Goldbeater's skin is the base on which the beaten gold is imposed. The gold itself is known as gold leaf, and it is of amazing thinness. Hence the necessity for a suitable base to carry it.

The best leaf is made from 23 carat gold, and is usually beaten out until it is only one 280,000th of an inch in thickness.

John Bull Hands Out the Raspberries

One who is not familiar with American slang would wonder what we mean by handing out the raspberries, or peddling the bull. We have often wondered where the expressions originated.

About so often the new generation springs a new one. Some of us remember the old "skiddoo" days and the "twenty-three for you." Then came the days when the youngsters wanted to express their disgust by saying "Oh nerts to you," and "How did you get that way?" Then came Hollywood, with its bombardment of unlisted vocabulary of superlative adjectives describing their headliners from hair-ends to toe-tips in bombastic terms that would make Webster look like a piker, and while all these expressions are illuminating to us, they surely draw down the curtain of bewilderment on the foreign-born endeavoring to become, of us, one.

But to return to the headline of John Bull and the raspberries. It is quite apparent where the expression "passing the bull" originated. Those of us who remember the millions of dollars Uncle Sam loaned England during the first struggle, and all he has ever received in return was a lot of "bull."

The promises unfulfilled of protection for Poland, Czechoslovakia, and, lastly, the Finns, look to us, in our American way of thinking, like another bunch of bull—a nice juicy box of raspberries.

Taking an engineer's viewpoint of undertakings, it might look like Great Britain has bitten off an awful big chew. MR. HARTZELL.

Wife Knocker-Downer Gets Speedy Come-Uppance

It is generally considered inexpedient to knock down one's wife even when the greatest secrecy is maintained, but when a man brazenly commits the offense in plain sight of the law, the risk is considerably greater—as Bennie Martella, alias Wm. Carrigan, alias Bill Marcus, discovered Monday of this week. Martella, age 34, with his 16-year-old wife, Sepha, were seen near the Garin warehouse by Deputy Sheriff Al Vervais when the latter was driving down Neal Street in his car. And as Vervais noted the two, he saw the man deliberately fell the woman with a blow from his fist. Investigating, Vervais learned from the woman that she and her husband were en route from San Luis Obispo to visit relatives in this part of the state and that she had become lonesome for her two-months-old child, who had been left with her sister in San Luis Obispo, and had shown her grief by crying. Her husband, exasperated with her, thereupon vented his exasperation by means of his fist, as aforesaid. Smarting from the blow, the wife willingly told Vervais all she knew about her husband, how he was wanted in San Luis Obispo for passing bad checks, etc. Investigation disclosed the truth of her story, and the two were taken to Hayward, there to await officers from San Luis Obispo to take Martella into custody and to return Mrs. Martella to her child in San Luis Obispo.

It was reported that Mrs. Hugo Radbruch was awarded the chenille bedspread which was recently disposed of by the 4-H Club.

Records—For What?

Some may think it foolhardy for a man to risk his life adding another few miles to a record, or diving another few feet deeper into the ocean. But these men are doing something for science. But others—

A Jugoslavian played cards continuously for 56 hours to establish a record. A smoking record is held by an Englishman, who smoked 144 cigarettes in 14 hours' continuous chain-smoking. Another Englishman played the piano continuously for 122 hours to establish a record. Then there's an American, William Fischler by name, who balanced 11,300 matches on a bottle in 30 hours. And a San Francisco student holds a kissing record. He kissed 40 girls in five minutes.

All for what?

FIRST: Accumulated wastes swell up bowels and press on nerves in the digestive tract. SECOND: Partly digested food starts to decay forming GAS, often bringing on sour stomach, indigestion, and heartburn, bloating you up until you sometimes gasp for breath. Adlerika gives double relief with DOUBLE ACTION. BALANCED Adlerika containing three laxatives and five carminatives relieves STOMACH GAS almost at once. It often clears bowels in less than two hours. Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

"And what'd you go to the library for, Sheila?"

"Well, we wanted to see each other, Joe. You see, when I went to give back that blue purse—and I lost it, Ma, but my money's here safe, I left it home! Well, and then, Joe, when I went to the Mc Canns, to give back the money, I got myself up like a beggar, remember?—so that they'd feel sorry for me, see? Well, it seems that this Gertrude Keane, whose purse it was, is a ward of the Mc Canns—her father and mother died when she was little, and she grew up with the Mc Canns. And Peter McCann was right there—and I hadn't seen him since Tiller's Beach because he had lost my address but I didn't know that—"

"Slow up, Sheila! You and he liked each other at the beach?"

"Just that one day. And then we danced that night."

"And then the next time you meet him it's four days before his marriage to another girl?"

"You see, Joe?"

"But you were still in love with him?"

"Well, I sort of liked him." Sheila suddenly took a firmer tone. "But I hate him now!" she said.

"Three days afther ye've merried him!" her mother muttered in an undertone. "That's fine doin's!"

"Wait a minute, Ma. So you and Peter said you'd meet?"

She swallowed, nodded, watching her brother's face anxiously, with drenched eyes. Then, fighting back the tears, she told them of her incredible adventure.

Presently Joe interrupted.

"Sheila, listen. I want to believe you, and I want to get this straight. But it sounds awfully fishy. Why should those men want to drag you and Peter Mc Cann along with them? Why shouldn't they let you go home?"

"Well, they were trying to hide something, Joe; they were afraid. They were trying to hide something!"

"Go on. What happened then?"

"Then we went bumping up and up and up into the most desolate old house you ever saw, and I was so tired I lay down and went to sleep with all my clothes on.

"And the next day—yesterday—there we were with three terrible-looking men, only they turned out to be not so fierce, and then this first man came up and I guess he told them everything was all right, because, anyway, we started down in the same truck—only first I cooked dinner for them. Ma, I cooked a pot-roast, only I had to thicken it with flour, because there wasn't any cornstarch—so then they brought us to this place called Capitol Junction—"

"But when were you in Boston, Sheila?"

"In Boston! We weren't in Boston."

"That's where your telegram came from."

"Why, it couldn't have been, Joe! We gave him our names on Saturday at the studio, and he said he'd send the telegrams right away. He thought Peter and I were married, or were going to be, anyway—"

"But listen, Sheila, let's get this straight. Were you married here in New York?"

"Married! Joe, you're crazy, or else I'm going crazy. I don't know which! We never were married. We hate each other! We never thought of getting married!"

"I guess you and I don't understand each other," Joe said slowly, after a long pause. "I guess we're sort of—in the dark. Who sent that?"

He took a much-folded limp oblong of yellow paper from his pocket, opened it, passed it to Sheila.

She flattened it, read it, and looked at him. Then she read it again, this time including a glance at the date line, "Boston, March 15, 12:13 A. M."

The message was brief:

"Peter Mc Cann and I married by justice of the peace this evening," it said. "Very happy letter soon."

It was signed "Sheila."

For a long time Sheila sat staring at them all in silence. The color drained from her face.

"Is that what he sent?" she whispered at last.

"That came Sunday morning," Joe answered, watching her.

"Well, of course it's a lie, Joe," she said simply. "We never were in Boston, we never were married. You can go to the library and you'll see the marks on the roof where we jumped out, I suppose. They're probably still there in the snow. And you can see the studio. Peter'll tell you the same. And you can find Capitol Junction on the map!"

"You all believed the worst of me," Sheila answered, getting angry. "You all thought I'd run off and got married by a justice of the peace! All of you, Angela and Ma and even Joe!

"All right," she stammered, trembling and getting to her feet. "All right, I will run away! You'll never hear of me again! I won't have the police chasing me up and printing stories that I eloped with another girl's fellow—you've ruined me, between you! You'll never see me again!"

"Sheila, for heaven's sake!" Joe protested. "Be your age. Getting a telegram like that, what else could Ma think?"

"Ma was just as bad as the rest of you!" Sheila sobbed wildly. "Don't touch me, Joe, don't hold me! I tell you I'm going away and I'm never coming back, never!"

"Oh, blessed Saint Joseph, save us!" Angela prayed, frantically.

No heavenly intervention appeared likely. But there was an interruption, nevertheless. Frank Mc Cann quietly opened the hall door and stepped into the kitchen.

He was confronted by Sheila, pale-faced, with blazing eyes. She had thrown off her brother's detaining hand, her fingers had been on the knob when Frank turned it.

"Hello, hello!" Peter's older brother said in his pleasant voice as he took in the scene. "What's going on here?"

"What's going on," Sheila answered hotly, with a heaving chest, "is that my mother and my brother and sister don't believe me, and I've had about enough of being treated like a thief and a liar and a street-walker and I don't know what else besides!"

"Well, here—here don't be in such a hurry!" Frank said, stopping her with a big, gentle hand.

"I've got to go!" Sheila told him, breathlessly.

"But wait a minute—"

"You wouldn't," she told him. "You'd get out if your mother and sister and brother all double-crossed you!"

Gentle and dark and good-natured, he smiled down at her, not freeing her arm from the grip of his fingers.

"Well, I never double-crossed you, did I, Sheila?"

"Let me go!" the girl said angrily. She looked up, and for the first time in her life she really saw him, a dark, smiling young man, with Irish blue eyes.

"I never double-crossed you, did I?" Frank said.

The girl spoke dazedly, as if out of a dream.

"No, you never double-crossed me."

"Sit down, then," he said.

Sheila did not move her eyes.

"Be a good girl," Frank urged.

Suddenly she sat down. She still watched his face expectantly.

"My father is very anxious to see Sheila and you, Mrs. Carscadden," Frank said. "So that we can begin to get all this straightened out. Unfortunately—unfortunately Joe and I, here, gave the thing to the papers at noon today," he added with a rueful laugh.

"There was no marriage, it seems now," Joe said.

"No, but the evening papers have it."

Joe clicked teeth and tongue. Mrs. Carscadden began a wail, put her fingers over her mouth again.

"What else could we do?" Frank argued. He had put out a big hand and gripped Sheila's fingers as they lay on the table, but he was not looking at her. "We had given the disappearance story to the police Saturday night," he said. "Then the telegrams came. The quickest way to hush the whole thing up was to tell them that you and Pete had decided to give your families a surprise and get married. We made it as—as dignified as we could, didn't we, Joe? We said that this followed up a friendship begun at Tiller's Beach last summer—that kind of thing.

"What complicates it," he said, directly to Joe, "is that when Sheila and Pete got to town tonight they went straight to a police station and turned in the story. The bootlegger story, I mean. So that whatever we do now, it's—well, it'll cause some little confusion," Frank concluded, with his grave half-smile for the distressed and attentive circle.

"I'll tell the world!" Joe said.

"Papa telephoned the police station." Frank resumed, "and they had already sent a man up to the Broadway place. We'll get the dope on that, and then we'll know how to go on. Probably the police will take it up at this point."

All the time his hand rested firmly, encouragingly, on Sheila's and it was as if his spirit had laid quieting hands upon her spirit as well; she continued to sit docilely beside him, her bright eyes moving about the circle.

She did not, as a matter of fact, hear anything that they were saying. She was absorbed in a strange, thrilling adventure of her own. The shabby kitchen, the familiar pots and pans, the oilcloth-covered table with the sticky sugar bowl and the dingy spoons slipped, handle up, into a red glass tumbler—all these were before her eyes, but she did not see them. She did not see her mother's square, anxious face, under her thin, well-brushed gray hair, nor Joe's dark features, nor Angela's pale skin and shadowed eyes and aureole of gold.

Now and then Sheila looked thoughtfully at Frank Mc Cann, studying his face with childlike, vague, serious eyes. He was as dark as Peter, with Peter's blue eyes. But his shoulders were squarer, and there was something definite, poised about him. He made Peter seem like a little boy. Just the twist of his square mouth, not quite smiling, all sympathetic as he occasionally glanced at her was enough to set her pulses moving to a slow, rhythmic beat that seemed to be rocking the whole world as well as the heart of Sheila Carscadden.

"Be a good girl," he had said to her. And he had called her "Sheila." After she had run away from all the hatefulness, from this new, accusing, suspicious Angela, and this reproachful Joe, and this totally unknown Ma, then she knew that she would take these magic phrases out of the very inner chamber of her soul and taste them over and over again on her tongue.

"Now, tomorrow being St. Patrick's Day, it's a holiday," Frank was saying. "And my mother wondered if you and Joe and Sheila would come down to our house in the morning, Mrs. Carscadden, and then we can talk the whole thing over. There'll probably be a report from the police department by then and we can give out a statement to the press and straighten everything out. And by this time next week," Frank said cheerfully, rising, "everyone will have forgotten all about it. You'll be down?"

Ma glanced at Joe, and Joe nodded.

"I will!" Ma then said solemnly.

Frank stood looking at them all. "My mother wants you to know that whatever you think is right, my brother'll do," he said.

"I thought you'd want to, Sheila," Frank said.

Mrs. Carscadden glanced at Sheila.

"It wouldn't be fair to your brother, an' him in love wit' another young lady," she said.

Sheila's bewildered eyes went from Frank's serious, handsome face to her mother's face; returned to Frank's again. Color began to stain her cheeks.

"What are you talking about?" she demanded flatly.

"Niver you mind, miss!" her mother answered.

"We feel as if you got the—the rotten end of this, Sheila," Frank explained, with a half-smile. "It might be that you and your mother—that all of us—it might be that we felt—"

He floundered; his kindly smile finished the sentence.

"There's ger'rls that feel they have reputations to lose!" Mrs. Carscadden contributed stingingly.

"My Father—my brother—we all want to—well, to do whatever we can—" Frank began again.

Sheila, disdaining words, laughed scornfully.

"Come," Frank said. "you like Pete, you know you do."

"Sheila," Angela breathed, "you love him! You've always loved him. Why—don't you—"

Sheila touched her sister's hand.

"Shut-up," she said mildly. Angela was still.

"Sheila, step out here into the hall a minute," Frank said. "I want to speak to you."

Still disheveled, and pale, and with delicate umber circles about her dark blue eyes, Sheila obeyed. It was marvelous how she liked to obey him. She leaned against the dirty wall of the odorous narrow hallway and Frank addressed a few urgent sentences to her.

"Sheila, I know how you feel. It's been terribly rough on you," Frank began. "But you mustn't blame your folks. What else could they think when those wires came, but that you and Pete had run off together?

"This Ken, whoever he is, must be a smart devil," Frank went on, as Sheila merely raised her solemn eyes to his without speaking. "He's probably the brains of the whole outfit. He saw that an elopement would shut us all up, d'you see, and give them time. It's too bad, it's all as rotten as it can be, but it's nobody's fault. You just have to keep your nerve for a few days . . ."

"Will the morning papers have the story that we were married?" the girl asked, somberly.

"Well, they may. But what do you care, if"— Frank changed the form of his words—"since it's not true?" he asked.

"I do care," she said, stubbornly.

"Can't you look at the whole thing as a sort of adventure, something that might happen in a movie, say? You and Pete will think this is a great joke, some day."

"There's only one thing," Sheila began suddenly, after a troubled study of his handsome, dark face. "I won't marry Peter Mc Cann. Not if the Church itself—"

"Listen, listen," he said soothingly, his hand on her arm, "you don't have to get so excited about it. You don't have to. You don't have to marry anyone, if you don't want to!"

"I'll become a nun, first!" Sheila whispered, fiercely. She saw Frank's characteristic half-smile brighten his face.

"You won't have to go that far."

"But if his mother and father expect me to—" Sheila began, anxiously.

Frank reflected a moment.

"They don't," he told her briefly.

"You're sure they don't?"

The man spoke more slowly:

"Why, they wouldn't want you to do anything you didn't want to do. They might think you wanted to."

"Well," she said, in instant relief, "I don't want to."

"You know, Sheila," Frank began, and looked away, hesitating. "You know, my mother thought," he began again, "that since you and Peter had been shut up in that place for two nights—"

He hesitated, and Sheila took it up defiantly:

"Yes, I know. And what's more, Peter was in my room that first night, what there was left of it, that is. But I don't care! It doesn't make the slightest difference."

"It was only a question of justice to you, Sheila."

"Well, you can tell your mother that I'm perfectly satisfied!"

"Miss Kennedy — my young lady—" Frank persisted, "agreed with my mother."

"Well, then she doesn't understand the way I feel!" Sheila said hotly.

Frank was smiling, as at an angry child.

"She's a pretty wise young lady, Bernadette," he said, as if he were merely thinking aloud. Sheila stood looking at him, panting.

"You don't think I ought to marry Peter!" she challenged him.

"I thought—" Her earnestness affected him in spite of himself, and he looked at her with his kindest expression. Sheila seemed small and pale, in her scant old cotton gown, with her tumbled coppery bang falling on her broad forehead. She was fighting for her life.

"I thought you'd want to, Sheila," Frank said, sympathetically.

"Frank!" Suddenly she was clinging to him, jumbled against him, soft and warm and sweet. "Don't let them make me!"

If he said anything to her she did not hear it. His arm was about her for a minute, his face against her hair.

Then they had drawn apart, and his fingers, that had been gripping hers, were loosened, and he was running down the stairs. Sheila stood dazed, alone in the hallway. After a while she turned toward the kitchen; a strange light was in her absent eyes, a dreamy smile on her lips. She moved like a sleepwalker.

When Sheila re-entered the room it was to a sulphurous silence on the part of her mother, who was alone there. Joe had gone to bed in the front room, and Angela was in Sheila's place in the big bed, crying, asleep, or feigning unconsciousness, Sheila could not tell. It was a little hard to manage a dignified performance of disrobing and ablutions with her mother's steely eyes upon her, and with the consciousness that she would presently come to bed in the same small room with her, but Sheila achieved it.

Angela rarely slept in the big bed. It was a tacit sign of Sheila's alienation from the family that she should be there tonight.

"A lot I care!" Sheila thought angrily. "They're all against me!" She deliberately summoned Frank Mc Cann to her mind, deliberately dwelt upon every look of his, every word, his smiling remoteness from any trouble of hers; he that was so cool and faultless and amused at it all! "No girl would ever get that one into trouble," Sheila thought, going off to sleep.

At eleven o'clock the next morning she and her mother and Joe presented themselves at the Mc Cann mansion. Part of the way they rode in a bus, following the Fifth Avenue side of the park in the holiday-morning excitement.

Crowds were already gathering for the St. Patrick's Day parade. Bands were abroad. There was snow left in the park, great stretches of it, under the bare trees, and there were children skating and screaming on the pond. It was a cold, sunless morning, with a sharp bite in the heavy air. Sheila maintained a sulky silence all the way; her mother and brother scarcely spoke.

She was but twenty-one. And this morning her life was ruined before her. No girl alive could live down headlines like those, no girl could go to an office with this to face!

Most of the morning papers had run a conservative notice of the marriage. "Second Son of Judge Mc Cann Surprises Family," and "Missing Pair Married in Boston"—that was the general order.

There Was a Way, And Lass Knew It!

TWO people were walking along a road together. One was a young woman, the other a handsome farm lad. The farm lad was carrying a large pail on his back, holding a chicken in one hand, a cane in the other, and leading a goat. They came to a dark lane.

Said the girl: "I'm afraid to walk here with you. You might try to kiss me."

Said the farm lad: "You need not be afraid. How could I kiss you with all these things I'm carrying?"

"Well, you might stick the cane in the ground, tie the goat to it, and put the chicken under the pail," was the ready reply.
